In the wake of heightened public concerns after the Ebola virus was transmitted to two Dallas nurses by a Liberian man (now deceased) who had entered the U.S. after becoming infected, the Health Law & Policy Institute will hold a public health preparedness program for law enforcement, county and city government officials, area judges, and public health officials. The expert speakers will address the following topics: an overview of the state and federal issues in quarantine and isolation law; whether and how health workers should consider quarantine or isolation; law enforcement and EMS's role in responding to requests for assistance in situations where quarantine or isolation may arise; employer guidance for Ebola issues in the workplace; and the relationship among port, airport and local health officials in addressing personal control measures.

There will be ample opportunity for discussion among participants and speakers at this event.

*Registration is complimentary, but seating is limited.
Reserved parking will be available in lot 19B.*
