By Joy Sewing

If you asked the more than 50 women at the recent with annual Talk, which runs who was the most popular, "I'd say it's Madonna. She's the one who always has the most fun."

"She's the one who always has the most fun."

The conversation, which was led by University of Houston Women's Studies Program director Elizabeth Gregory, was part of the university's annual Table Talk event.

Table Talk is a way for women to explore their lives in a fast-paced, conversational setting. The event features a series of conversations on various topics, such as gender, identity, and sexuality.

The event also provides an opportunity for attendees to learn about the different voices and perspectives of women from diverse industries and backgrounds.

"It's a way for women to explore their lives in a fast-paced, conversational setting," said Elizabeth Gregory, director of the Women's, Gender & Sexuality Studies Program at the University of Houston.

The event also provided an opportunity for attendees to learn about the different voices and perspectives of women from diverse industries and backgrounds.

"It's a way for women to explore their lives in a fast-paced, conversational setting," said Elizabeth Gregory, director of the Women's, Gender & Sexuality Studies Program at the University of Houston.

The event also provided an opportunity for attendees to learn about the different voices and perspectives of women from diverse industries and backgrounds.

"It's a way for women to explore their lives in a fast-paced, conversational setting," said Elizabeth Gregory, director of the Women's, Gender & Sexuality Studies Program at the University of Houston.

The event also provided an opportunity for attendees to learn about the different voices and perspectives of women from diverse industries and backgrounds.

"It's a way for women to explore their lives in a fast-paced, conversational setting," said Elizabeth Gregory, director of the Women's, Gender & Sexuality Studies Program at the University of Houston.