“NAFTA and the Environment After 20 Years: A View From NAFTA’s Commission for Environmental Cooperation”

by

Dr. Irasema Coronado
Executive Director of the NAFTA Commission for Environmental Cooperation

Wednesday, March 25, 2015
noon
University of Houston Law Center
209 BLB (2nd Floor)
Boxed lunches will be served.
1 Hour CLE Credit (no ethics)
Please RSVP to eenr@uh.edu.

NAFTA’s Commission for Environmental Cooperation promotes international cooperation and public participation to conserve, protect and enhance North America’s environment while increasing economic, trade and social links among the three countries. While the CEC has successfully established cooperative work programs and promoted public engagement through its innovative Submissions on Enforcement Matters process, its unique role and novel approach have also placed it squarely in the middle of environmental controversies such as oil sands development, protection of endangered species, regulation of coal-fired U.S. power plants, and environmental impacts of economic development projects in Mexico.

Irasema Coronado was appointed Executive Director of the CEC in December 2012. Previously, she was a professor in the Department of Political Science at the University of Texas at El Paso, and an affiliated faculty member in the Environmental Science and Engineering Ph.D. program. A former Fulbright Scholar, Dr. Coronado holds a BA from the University of South Florida and a MA and Ph.D. from the University of Arizona.

For directions, maps and parking information, please go to http://www.law.uh.edu/eenrcenter/speaker-series.asp at the bottom of the webpage.