David Crump is a Professor of Law, an outfielder in the Senior Baseball League, and a guitarist in a country rock band. True to his Renaissance education, he has worked as an aerospace engineer, assistant district attorney, and economist testifying as an expert witness in federal court. His published books range from courtroom-drama novels and children’s poetry to technical coverages of psychology, thermodynamics, and game theory. He lives in Houston, where a real event with his team on the baseball field inspired him to begin this collection of sonnets.

“If you haven’t read poetry since high school, now is the time to start!”
- Richard Alderman

“Beethoven . . . Baseball . . . Buicks . . . [and] Elway . . . . These sonnets . . . enjoy the world!”
- Patricia Yongue

“Extraordinary . . . What fun these poems are!”
- Bryan Garner

“[E]xtraordinary . . . These meticulously crafted sonnets rocket exuberantly from the ancient world to cyberspace, unsettling the mind . . . [and] surprising the heart.”
- Carolyn Wilkerson Bell

Susan Duval Anderson Professor of English, Randolph-Macon Woman’s College

“[These] meticulously crafted sonnets rocket exuberantly from the ancient world to cyberspace, unsettling the mind . . . [and] surprising the heart.”
- Carolyn Wilkerson Bell

Susan Duval Anderson Professor of English, Randolph-Macon Woman’s College

“[These] meticulously crafted sonnets rocket exuberantly from the ancient world to cyberspace, unsettling the mind . . . [and] surprising the heart.”
- Carolyn Wilkerson Bell

Susan Duval Anderson Professor of English, Randolph-Macon Woman’s College