

Ajay Gupta, a tax attorney and financial economist with extensive experience in both the private and public sectors, consults and delivers expert testimony on valuation issues in tax litigation, arbitration proceedings, and regulatory hearings. Previously, he practiced tax and securities law for several years in the U.S. and the U.K., counseling multinational enterprises, private equity firms, real estate investment trusts, and regulated utilities on domestic and cross-border transactions. More recently, he was an attorney-adviser at the Tax Court and a special assistant U.S. attorney with the Department of Justice. He has served as a contributing editor at Tax Analysts and advised the Independent Commission for the Reform of International Corporate Taxation. Before coming to UH, he taught tax law courses at Georgetown, DePaul, and Chicago-Kent law schools. He received a JD cum laude from Harvard, where he was a John M. Olin Fellow in law and economics; an LLM in Taxation from NYU, where he held a dean's scholarship; an MBA in finance from Yale; and an AM in economics from Stanford.