Can a foreign-educated lawyer practice law in the United States?
The answer is “yes” and “no.” To practice law in the United States, both US-educated lawyers and foreign-trained lawyers must pass the bar examination and be admitted in the state in which they intend to practice. Each state establishes requirements for eligibility to take the bar examination in that state, and eligibility requirements vary from state-to-state. The eligibility requirements may include:

- Completion of a U.S. LL.M. degree at an ABA-accredited school
- Completion of specific courses within an LL.M. program
- Practice in their home country for a specific period of time
- Licensed to practice in home country

Students considering taking a bar examination should review and confirm eligibility requirements before beginning any LL.M. program. Only a state’s board of law examiners – not a law school - can confirm eligibility to take a state’s bar examination.

UHLC LL.M. REQUIREMENTS

- The LL.M. degree requires the completion of a minimum of 24 credits. Courses are designated as one, two, three or four credits. A credit refers to the length of time that a class meets each week. For example, a two credit course meets for two hours each week for one semester. The fall semester is August-December and the spring semester is January-May. All course selections must be approved by the student’s faculty advisor.

- Lawyers who earned their degree outside of the United States are required to take Introduction to American Law (5319) and Lawyering Skills and Strategies (5314).
In addition to these two courses, students in a concentration/specialty, such as International Law, are required to complete a specific number of concentration-specific courses:

- Energy, Environment and Natural Resources (EENR)  15 credits of EENR coursework
- Health Law*  18 credits of Health coursework
- Intellectual Property & Information Law (IPIL)  15 credits of IPIL coursework
- International Law (IL)  15 credits of IL coursework
- Tax Law*  18 credits of tax coursework

* Specific specialty course(s) required see program requirement chart for details

Introduction to American Law (5319) and Lawyering Skills and Strategies (5314) are the only required courses for the LL.M. in U.S. Law program. All other courses are selected to meet personal or professional goals, such as meeting bar eligibility requirements.

TEXAS BAR EXAM COURSE REQUIREMENTS

- To meet Texas bar exam eligibility requirements, students graduating AFTER October 1, 2016 must meet curricular requirements by taking certain courses during the LL.M. program:

  Professional Responsibility (6321)
  Lawyering Skills and Strategies (5314)
  Introduction to American Law (5319)
  Six credits of coursework that are in subjects tested on the Texas Bar Exam

- Students in a concentration/specialty program such as Intellectual Property will complete more than 24 credits to meet both LL.M. program and Texas bar examination requirements. Students admitted to the LL.M. in U.S. law program can meet both program and bar exam requirements within 24 credits.
